The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The present claimed invention reads over Lerner (US Patent Number 4,642,767) as it requires a manual grouping of accounts into financial statement items. Lerner requires a collection of coded data reflecting totals of accounts (see Lerner column 3, lines 2-7). This is different from the present claimed invention which receives accounting data and then requires a user to manually group this data into financial statement items and then processes the accounting data based on these groupings into totals of accounts.

The present claimed invention reads over Sampson (US Patent Number 5,390,113) as Sampson "eliminates the ledger" (see column 3, lines 30-32). Sampson further requires a predetermined chart of accounts in order to group journal data. The present invention does not have a chart of accounts because the user is required to manually group the data from the journal into its appropriate financial statement item. This manually step is non-obvious to a system which requires a chart of accounts for a number of reasons. Primarily, the present invention requires a user knowledgeable in accounting, as the user must know which accounts roll into which financial statement items. In contrast, a system with a predetermined chart of accounts can be operated by a person with little to no knowledge in accounting.

The present claimed invention reads over the closest non-patent literature, Peachtree, for the same reasons as stated with respect to Sampson. Namely, Peachtree requires a predetermined chart of account. Peachtree further requires the journal data to be submitted in a predetermined sequence. The claimed invention specifically addresses this point by reciting, “wherein said grouping is regardless of an account sequence.”

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled “Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance.”
